

Abstract of the Disclosure

A removable rack system for carrying elongated cargo such as surfboards or canoes on vehicles such as RVs, which have a tall, substantially vertical surface such as the back end of the vehicle. A rack is mounted to the bumper and includes vertical and horizontal rails for positioning support bars that hold the cargo in place, and a tray is mounted to the receiver hitch or to bars extending from the bumper brackets, to support the weight of the cargo. No damage or alteration of the vehicle is required, and no special tools are required. The tray may include a receiver for daisy-chaining a second hitch for towing a trailer.